“Mosi Musa: A True Tale About a Monkey Raised By His Grandma”

by Georgeanne Irvine
(San Diego Zoo)

(NAPS)—Immediately rejected by his mother at birth, Mosi Musa the vervet monkey had a challenging start. But with the help of his grandmother, Thelma, along with the zoo-keepers of the San Diego Zoo, Mosi was raised in a safe and loving environment and continues to grow and thrive.

This engaging picture book details Mosi's first few weeks living in an incubator with eight feedings a day, surrounded by his favorite toys and visits from his grandmother, so that when he is finally old enough to move into the zoo's enclosure permanently, he feels comfortable with her by his side. Rich with informative details and a variety of adorable photos, this true storybook is endearing for all ages. Purchase at <http://bit.ly/2MehDdF>.

“Red Hotel”

by Ed Fuller and Gary Grossman
(Beaufort Books)

“Red Hotel” is an incredibly timely globe-trotting thriller that is fiction on the edge of reality. A Tokyo hotel is bombed and dozens are killed and injured, so why is one man walking away from the massacre with a smile on his face? Former Army intelligence officer Dan Reilly, now international hotel executive, is on the case.

As Reilly utilizes all the contacts he can to get to the bottom of the disaster, he learns he isn't just looking for one person but an entire organization that he never suspected. This discovery leads him to more calculated acts of terror around the globe and a much more internationally connected web of corruption than he was prepared for.
